

Constitution Day

On September 17, 1787, delegates signed the U.S. Constitution. To commemorate this historical event, federal law requires schools that receive federal funding and all federal agencies to hold programs about the Constitution on or near that date each year.

Writing a Classroom Constitution

Students can hold a constitutional convention for their classroom that lists the responsibilities of students and the teacher and the rights that will be respected and protected.

The National Archives provides a template for display (see The Constitution and Our Community, pages 25–26).

Visualizing Constitution Data

Word Clouds

When analyzing complex texts such as the U.S. Constitution, it can be helpful to create visual representations. Word clouds highlight words that appear frequently in source text (excluding common words). They can be used to identify ideas, themes, and key terms. In fact, scholars from the Comparative Constitutions Project use word clouds to visualize data when comparing constitutions from different countries.

Teachers and students can create and analyze their own word clouds by pasting text from the U.S. Constitution into online word cloud generators.
